Charlotte Elder, MBBS

Dr. Charlotte Elder is a Gynecologist and Obstetrician in Melbourne, Australia. She has a special interest in Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology and Transgender Healthcare and was the first Australian to achieve the IFEPAG Fellowship in Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology. Charlotte also holds a position as a Clinical Fellow within the Department of Pediatrics at The University of Melbourne.

Dehlia Moussaoui, MD

Dehlia Moussaoui (she/her) is a Swiss medical doctor, specialized in Pediatrics. She underwent a 2-year clinical and research fellowship in Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology at the Royal Children's Hospital in Melbourne, Australia (2021-2023). Back in Geneva (Switzerland), she is now combining a clinical and research position as a chief resident in Adolescent Medicine and Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology. Her main interest is improving access to menstrual health for vulnerable adolescents, including trans and gender diverse individuals. During her fellowship in Melbourne, she conducted different research projects with the Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology and Gender Service teams on gynecological health in trans and gender diverse adolescents, including pelvic pain and menstrual suppression.

Ken Pang, PhD

Ken Pang is a pediatrician at the Royal Children's Hospital in Melbourne, Australia, where he works to help support transgender young people and their families. He is also an Honorary Associate Professor within the Department of Pediatrics at the University of Melbourne and leads a multidisciplinary team at the Murdoch Children's Research Institute, whose research aims to optimize the mental, physical, and reproductive health of transgender young people. In the past 5 years, he has published >40 articles in trans health in journals such as JAMA Pediatrics, BMJ, Lancet Child and Adolescent Health, and Pediatrics.
